Wounded Warrior Project® Announces New Advisory Council

Jacksonville, Fla. (March 27, 2015) -- Wounded Warrior Project® (WWP) has assembled an advisory council to advance the current and future work of WWP. This group of accomplished community leaders will provide leadership with direction that will help achieve WWP's vision of fostering the most successful, well--adjusted generation of wounded service members in our nation's history.

Created by WWP's leadership team and board of directors, the advisory council includes senior government officials, current and former service members and/or caregivers, corporate or major donors, C--suite executives, and national figures who have demonstrated an interest in the WWP mission of honoring and empowering Wounded Warriors.

"The WWP Advisory Council will help guide the direction of the organization and navigate its future," says WWP chief operating officer Al Giordano. "This council brings a wealth of experience to the table and will serve as an invaluable resource as we strive towards our goal of serving 100,000 warriors by 2017 and raising $500 million for our Long--Term Support Trust."

Members of the Council include:
